THE MEANING OF MARCONI*

The Marconi stereo set you choose today has the most distinguished lineage in electronics. In 1896 the first patent for "wireless telegraphy" was granted in England—to Marconi. In 1899 Marconi was the first to send a radio signal from England to France, in 1902 he was the first to span the Atlantic from England to this continent, by radio. In fact, Marconi's companies were a major presence in American telecommunications until 1919, when their assets in the United States were sold to a newly-formed American corporation.

Electronics progress under the Marconi name is still a vital and imaginative thing. For example, many international airlines, including such carriers as Pan-American, KLM, CPA and Air France, as well as the USAF and the RCAF fly true-to-course because of Canadian Marconi Company's Airborne Doppler Navigation Systems.

This tradition of being first has been accompanied in all Marconi developments by an engineering credo of being best. This applies in television and radio receivers, as well as in superb stereo consoles.

When you select any model bearing the Marconi name, you acquire a result of this tradition of excellence, manufactured by one of North America's leading electronics specialists. You may be assured that whatever the model of your choice, it will perform faithfully and in the fullest accordance with its specifications.
